MEASURES AND RECOMMENDATIONS FOR PROTECTION AND PREVENTION FROM CORONAVIRUS COVID 19

Measures and Recommendations for Protection and prevention from Coronavirus COVID 19

Submitted by Anonymous on Fri, 13/03/2020 - 01:21

What is COVID-19?

SARS-CoV-2 is a new virus from the family Coronavirus initially discovered in China in December 2019. The virus causes acute viral respiratory disease. The virus spreads from person to person, touch and respiratory droplets (coughing, sneezing, etc.).

The initial experiences show that elderly and chronically ill are exposed to higher risk of complications and severe forms of disease. The incubation period is 14 days during which the infected do not show any symptoms, but can transmit the virus to other people.

All passengers coming from high-and medium-risk countries should be in self-isolation within 14 days in their homes and to report themselves to the authorities should they feel any symptoms.

What are the symptoms of COVID-19?

The initial symptoms in people infected with COVID-19 are:

1. Fever and high body temperature;

How to self-isolate properly?

- Stay home, except during an emergency. If possible, work from home.
- Distance yourself from others in different spaces. Air the spaces regularly.
- If possible, use separate toilets/bathrooms. Alternatively, regularly disinfect the ones that everyone uses.
- Avoid sharing household appliances such as hand towels, covers, cups and glasses, and other crockery.
- If you order food/products through delivery services, let another member of the household to receive them, avoid contact with the delivery persons.
- Keep a safe distance of 1 to 2 meters from others
- Clean the surfaces of your home which you use most
- Follow the recommendations for prevention from health institutions.

If you feel similar or the same symptoms as the flu, do not visit a doctor, instead call the centres for public health.

What if you travel to and from the high- and medium-risk countries?

If you need to travel in some of the countries that are on the list of high- or medium-risk countries, it is recommended to postpone your travel except if this journey is related to medical causes.

Should you travel to some of these countries, it is mandatory to report yourself to the border police that you come from such country and to start a period of self-isolation for a period of 14 days. If at the moment you are located in some of the given countries, we recommend increased precaution measures at any time: follow the local media and directions issued by the local authorities.
