The government has asked Sri Lankans abroad who are expected to return to their homeland to stay safe in their places of residence until the corona virus is eradicated from the country.

The government has taken various measures to prevent the spread of the corona virus in the country. It has completely stopped foreign visits as a measure to prevent the virus from entering and spreading into the country.

This practice has been followed in other countries and transport activities within the country have been suspended. The government has said it will consider requests from foreign students, businessmen and professionals to visit the country once the corona virus is eradicated and conditions return to normal.

Traveling to airports or other places where they are currently at risk also puts them at risk of contracting the disease.

Therefore, Admiral Jayanath Colombage, Additional Secretary to the President in charge of International Divorce, has requested all Sri Lankans who wish to return to their homeland to report their identities to the Sri Lankan Embassy or Consulate General in the country.
